work experience

Autonomic Co-operative
Web designer, project manager & co-owner/2020-present

My role was pushed fear beyond the 'designer box' and I became a communicator and project manager, who is interested in finding simple and smart solutions for keeping asynchronous teams in a loop.

Working at Autonomic was the experience that pushed me into defining with my values as a truly progressive worker. As part of a non-hierarchical team, I learned self management skills, along with developing a strong sense of personal responsibility and tools to support coworkers effectively.

My praxis now incorporates radical care, active listening and non-violent communication (NVC), guided by a RadHR ↗ vision of the workplace.

Center for Technology and Society (ITS Rio)
Art Director/2019-2020

At ITS, I had the opportunity to put my approach in practice from scratch. First, by developing a unique visual identity with reliable assets to apply across a series of visual communication pieces.

But as I understand, the role of an art director goes beyond the visual output. A lot of work was put into reorganising the directory structure, making files and assets easy to find and edit without any loss. Many of the assets developed by me are still used by ITS to this day (December 2025).

As an enthusiast of contemporary technology themes, I also dived into intellectual work at ITS, publishing an essay ↗ and offering a course in the creative method ↗. I also occasionally lectured classes in other courses and interviewed philosopher Yuk Hui ↗ during his visit to Rio de Janeiro.
